Quarterly Fund Commentary

*Strategy Performance since Launch: 30.17%. Q1 2017: 2.66%.

Quarter one (Q1) was positive for equity markets with growth indicators strengthening across the globe. Emerging markets (EM) was the equity region with the strongest performance as the US Dollar (USD) weakened despite the Federal Reserve (Fed) talking up the prospect for 3 further interest rate rises. Europe was also a strong performer outpacing the United States (US) based on valuations and favourable election results in Germany and the Netherlands. During Q1 we increased exposure to EM equity funds and removed our Japan call. Our technology and healthcare calls added value and we remain constructive on these calls due to secular trends and valuations. Fixed income was subdued with only Euro corporate bonds showing positive performance, we continue to maintain our negative view on this asset class. From a geo-political perspective Donald Trump's presidency has begun in controversial fashion with the introduction of a number of unpopular executive orders. There have been no major pre-election policy changes thus far, with many commentators now expecting tax cuts and infrastructure plans to be announced in mid to late 2018. Trump may also struggle to get these plans implemented due to divisions in the Republican Party who have already rejected plans to repeal the Affordable Healthcare Act. In Europe all eyes are on the French election with a Marine Le Pen victory a potentially negative outcome. The polls so far are suggesting that Le Pen should lose in a run off. The Davy Balanced Growth Fund added 2.7% this quarter aided by the strong equity market, bonds detracted and alternatives were flat.

Investment Committee Commentary

Equities: Q1 saw the 3 main pillars of global growth – Europe, the US and China all moving in the right direction for the first time since the global financial crisis. This has proven a benign backdrop for equity markets with EM equity in particular, having a very strong start to Q1. While the backdrop remains favourable, there remain short term events which may cause periods of uncertainty in the coming months. The US has reached valuations that the committee feels are approaching fair value and the outlook for Europe and EM is becoming more positive. The French election is front and centre in terms of importance, nevertheless there are also concerns around an impasse in raising the US debt ceiling – which is crucial if Trump is to implement his tax cuts and spending plans. Added to this is the continuing rhetoric emanating from North Korea and their continuing testing of missile capabilities. The committee believes in maintaining equity allocations throughout these periods as long term fundamentals are still positive given the opportunities in other asset classes.

Fixed Income: The global growth backdrop has been negative for sovereign fixed income due to increasing inflation expectations although it has been somewhat positive for corporate bonds as corporate credit conditions become more favourable. The Fed have indicated that they will continue to hike rates this year with the potential for 3 further hikes on top of the 0.25% increase in March. We maintain a negative view of fixed income given this backdrop. Further to this the European Central Bank (ECB) are beginning to taper their bond purchases which may prove to be a negative backdrop for European bonds. While the returns on fixed income are more attractive than they have been for some time we remain negative due to the impending rate hikes and favourable outlook for global growth.

Alternatives: Our alternative bucket was flat during Q1 however we see this allocation as a defensive element to the Davy Balanced Growth Fund which will help to protect the fund in the event of volatile or stressed markets. Our view on alternatives and specifically absolute return funds remains positive and we have allocated some of the capital from fixed income to this asset class.

Cash: Cash remains at higher levels than normal as we wait for a better opportunity to deploy cash into other asset classes. Cash rates are currently close to zero however given the ECB tapering we expect to see rates increasing albeit slowly in Europe over the coming quarters.

Selection of Funds in Focus⁷

Threadneedle European Select Fund +6.8% - (EUR)	Vanguard European Bond Fund -1.5% - (EUR)
Threadneedle outperformed its benchmark during Q1 due to the stronger performance of defensive sectors and the renewal of the quality trade, following a rotation to cyclical sectors in the second half of 2016. The fund seeks to buy companies with pricing power and quality attributes and eschews more cyclical sectors such as financials, oil and gas, materials etc. Quality sectors such as healthcare and consumer staples were strong.	European bonds were negative during Q1 as global growth and inflation expectations picked up and risk assets such as equities performed strongly. French bonds – a large allocation in this passive fund - have also been under pressure due to the uncertainties around the French election. The ECB has also hinted that it may taper its monetary easing due to rising inflation and the German opposition to the program.
Vanguard Information Technology ETF +11.9% - (USD)	Goldman Sachs Bloomberg Commodity Index Total Return Portfolio -1.5% - (USD)
The fund has had a very strong start to the year with technology outperforming the S&P 500 in the US during Q1. The technology call is a secular long term theme which we believe will benefit portfolios as technological advances drive productivity and disrupt traditional industries. While the valuations on a Price to Earnings basis can be quite high in the sector we believe the growth prospects justify these multiples.	The fund was negative for the quarter primarily due to the weakness in the oil price. The promised supply cuts from the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) have failed to materialise due to failure to comply from many countries – which is a common occurrence for a cartel that is losing its influence. The fund is hedged to Euro which removes some of the currency volatility that can be inherent in commodity pricing.
Morgan Stanley Emerging Markets Fund +11.1% - (USD)	Fulcrum Diversified Core Absolute Return -0.3% (EUR)
The fund lagged its benchmark on the back of some very strong EM performance during Q1. While Morgan Stanley has a growth bias it was unable to match the performance of the index due to its lower beta. Our EM managers tend to be higher quality than the broad index and hence will often lag in strong bull markets. Over a business cycle they have proven to be astute stock pickers with the quality tilt particularly important during EM stress periods.	Fulcrum's performance was negative during Q1. While it made gains on a number of its underlying positions, (including US equities), in aggregate the fund made losses across its diversified portfolio, including currency losses (due to short Asian currencies relative to the US dollar). The fund retains its pro-cyclical positioning, especially in relation to Japan where Fulcrum believes central bank policies will lead to stronger equity market performance.
